Once upon a time there was a little human named Henry, who doesn't know anything about electricity, who decides to unplug his iPad to play it. But he has some strange feeling that what he did was wrong.

But while he is walking away, he hears a strange voice that sounds familiar...

But what do you know! It is Buster the bunny to talk to Henry! "Hey you! Did you know that an apple adapter uses 5 watts per minute! Even when not being used. And that an iPad has a 10-hour battery! So you don't need you charge me that often. And guess what else, here comes Charlie the charger!"

"Henry, over here! A charger also uses electricity even when not being used. So you should unplug me when you are done with me. Another thing you can do is to unplug everything when you are not using them. You can save 1 million dollars a year if you do that.

"Ok, I get the idea now. I will unplug everything from now on." And thanks to Henry, everybody is happy, and the world is a better place!
