

Nakua Konohia-Lind, born and raised in Hana Maui is a crewmember aboard Hokule'a the doubled hulled voyaging canoe which just recently finished the Malama Honua Voyage around the world. He has been apart of the Polynesian Voyaging Society since the year 2013 and was blessed to have done 13 legs of the entire 27 legs of the the voyage visiting many countries that a small town hawaiian man like him could never fathom to have gone to. Currently enrolled in college and also going through the process for the First Nations Futures Program up in Stanford university which he will be leaving for at the end of this month. Teaming up with the nature conservancy in the partnership known as the Maui nui makai network where we are developing community laws and regulations for fishing and striving to connect a little bit of science with a konohiki point of view of fishing so we don't damage our eco-system and the fish for our future generation.
